Mark your calendars now for the 2020 AMS Washington Forum. This much-anticipated event provides an important platform to examine public policy issues across the weather, water, and climate sciences. We will have several leadership keynotes.

- Addressing Our Wildland Fire Weather Needs
- Truth in Science: Ensuring Scientific Integrity
- The Future of Weather Forecasters and Technology
- Climate Adaptation and Resiliency: Are We Prepared?
- Unlocking the Spectrum Puzzle: Balancing Weather Information Needs with Increasing Global Demand for Spectrum

Keynote
Hon. Neil A. Jacobs
Acting Administrator of NOAA
The 2020 AMS Washington Forum provides a great environment for companies and institutions interested in learning more about how weather, water, and climate information can help support risk management across the public and private sectors. Collaboration and sharing scientific knowledge grow more critical every year. Join the event that provides an ideal opportunity for companies whose operations and planning are reliant on environmental factors.
